SAN MARCIAL, NEW MEXICO, IS SWEPT AWAY BY WATERS

Only Two Buildings in Town Of Over 1000 People Remain

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 25.—(UP)—Dawn today revealed the town of San Marcial, N. M., 100 miles south of Albuquerque, had been swept off the map by flood waters of the raging Rio Grande.

Only two buildings withstood the on slaught. They are the property of the Santa Fe Railroad and they house, on second floors, the residents who remained in the town.

All other structures in the town, which had a population of more than 1,000, succumbed to the turbulent river as it raced on to further destruction to the south.

From the windows of the Harvey House, owners watched their adobe homes crash into the black waters and disappear. Water was 10 feet deep in the business section.

Lone Telephone Wire.

Details of the flood, the worst in the history of the section, trickled into El Paso over a lone telephone wire. It was learned the damage will probably run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A. M. Van Coeverton, Harvey House manager, lowered himself from the second story of the building to talk over the telephone.

"I am standing in three feet of water in the Harvey House," Van Coeverton shouted to make himself heard over the swishing of the water.

"There are about 45 men in this building and one other. The water is rising.

"We have enough food for two days, if we are forced to remain here that long," Van Coeverton said.

"The situation is twice as bad as during the August flood. There is no chance of trains getting in here. We had expected to catch the last night train, but it was unable to get here.

To Attempt Rafts.

"Just tell them we are in good spirits and will pull out some way.

Van Coeverton said the party would attempt to leave the town on rafts today.

A hole 75 feet wide and eight feet deep was cut in the levee, weakened during August, by the waters which had been beating against it for three days. Seventy-five men fought the torrent with shovels and sandbags yesterday, but when they saw the floodwaters tearing away the levee, fled to the foothills, the remainder seeking the shelter of the Harvey House.

Damage probably will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars as the raging Rio Grande today continued to pour out of its banks, destroying everything within its reach.

SO. ARIZONA INUNDATED.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 25.—(AP)—The lowlands of southern Arizona were inundated again today, the second time this week. They had not yet recovered from cloudbursts and flood visitations of Monday night when more flood waters poured down upon them yesterday.

Rivers which ordinarily at this time of the year are small streams, were tearing at their banks. Several bridges had been torn from their piers and others were being weakened, and rail, air and highway traffic were disrupted as the result of continuing cloudbursts.

Three Hurt in Crash

Chicago, Sept. 25. —(UP)— Three men were seriously injured, two probably fatally, when an outbound elevated train struck a truck at a Cicero grade crossing today.

The most seriously injured were M. J. Ambrose and Jacob Decker, of Chicago, and a flagman. Ambrose's legs were fractured and he sufffered internal injuries. Decker's back was fractured.

The accident occurred during the rush hour. Scores of loop bound workers saw the crash. The truck was carried along more than 100 feet before the train stopped.

The fire department was called to remove the injured from the wreckage because of the danger from high voltage in the third rail.

OPPOSITION TO IMPROVEMENTS NOT STRENUOUS

North Siders Inquired About Details Proposed Works

No marked opposition to the proposed improvement west of Galena avenue and south of Everett street on the north side, was voiced at last evening's meeting of the city board of local improvements, which was atended by a large gathering of interested citizens and property owners. The occasion was the meeting set for the hearing of objections to local improvement ordinance, No. 251 which covers the approximate $50,000 improvement in the west end of the city on the north side of the river. The plan calls for the laying of reinforced concrete pavement, cement sidewalk and storm water drain on Hennepin avenue and Peoria avenue to Everett street and on Boyd street.

Frank C. Sproul and R. C. Bovey were the spokesmen of the evening and made inquiry of the board of local improvements of the approximate amount of the improvement which was to be assumed by the city. Mayor Frank D. Palmer estimated that about $15,000 would be paid by the city, including the grading of the streets and the paving of the street intersections. The public hearing was continued until next Tuesday evening at 8:15, Mayor Palmer assuring the property owners that the city would stand an equitable share of the improvement.

The city council granted an application for a permit to operate a pool and billiard hall to Richard Sarver, 111 Hennepin avenue.

NOT HANKERING FOR JOB, LEGGE TELLS SENATORS

Chairman of Farm Board Says He Won't be Hurt If Turned Down

Washington, Sept. 25—(AP)—Concluding two days of testimony before the Senate Agriculture committee Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board said today that "You can't hurt my feelings by sending me home" and added he did not demand credit for having been selected for the post he holds.

Legge's statement was made after Senator Frazier, Republican, North Dakota, earlier at the committee session had said the farmers of the nation had "lost confidence in the board because of the manner in which the board had tackled the agricultural relief problem."

"The farm organizations," Legge asserted, "wanted a business man on the board and I was considered to be in as close touch with the farmer from the limited field available.

"I do not believe the farmer is seeking a handout or any charity. If we put this money out haphazardly no one would be benefited and it would soon be gone. I believe our job should be done with consideration for measures of reasonable safety.

"That is what I intend to do. I would not attempt this position under any misapprehension."

Legge previously had promised to do all in his power to bring a greater share of prosperity to the farmer.

In testifying, Legge dealth chiefly with the question of stabilizing of wheat. He said the Farmers National Grain Marketing Association now being established, could carry on any needed stabilization more safely than the board. He added that in time stabilization agencies for cotton and pork would be considered.

DEFENDS I. H. C. POLICY

Washington, Sept. 25—(UP)—The foreign expansion policy of the International Harvester Company has aided rather than injured the American farmer, Alexander Legge former president of the company and now chairman of the Federal Farm Board, told the Senate Agriculture committee today.

Legge's defense of the company was precipitated by the charge of Senator Brookhart, Rep., Iowa, a member of the committee which is investigating qualifications of President Hoover's Farm Board nominees preparatory to their confirmation or rejection.

Brookhart charged the concern has increased the advantage of foreign competitors of the American farmer by establishing manufacturing plants abroad.

Legge said the company's net profits in the period from 1919 to 1928 averaged 7 1-2 per cent and its dividends 4 1-2 per cent; the Iowa Senator said the difference between profits and dividends had been used to build foreign trade to the detriment of American agriculture.

Lower Costs in U. S.

On the contrary, Legge replied the Harvester Company's foreign business has enabled it to reduce machinery costs to the American farmers.

Brookhart also challenged Legge's testimony of yesterday that it would require $10,000,000,000 for the board to finance the nation's crop. The annual surplus, Brookhart said, is valued only at $2,000,000,000, and if this were purchased, the rest would take care of itself.

Legge's assertion that he had been told cotton growers west of the Mississippi could grow the commodity four to five cents cheaper than those east of the river aroused the ire of Senators Smith, Dem., S. C., Caraway, Dem., Ark., and Heflin Dem., Ala.

"If you are going to listen to that kind of advice, you might as well adjourn the board," Smith said.

Some Illinois Corn is Damaged by Frost

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 25—(AP)—Some Illinois corn has already been damaged by frost, the Weather Bureau synopsis of crop conditions for the week ending yesterday, said today. The synopsis follows:

"Temperature was low early in the weke, but about normal at the close. Corn ripened slowly. Some late corn in lowlands of extreme northern counties was damaged considerably by frost on the eighteenth. Silo filling continued. Little wheat was sown, plowing and preparation of soil were retarded in north and central areas by dry soil.

"Except for moderate showers in west central counties the week was generally dry over the state. Cow peas and soy beans were harvested and clover hulling made good progress. Pastures are poor. Cotton is opening in the extreme south at an inreasing rate."

IMPRESSIONS OF DIXON TOLD BY REV. FR. FLYNN

St. Anne's Priest Was Speaker at Meeting of Kiwanians

Rev. Fr. T. G. Flynn of St. Anne's Catholic church, in speaking to the members of the Dixon Kiwanis Club yesterday afternoon, gave his impressions of Dixon in a very interesting manner.

"Dixon is not a city to be ashamed of," Rev. Flynn said in opening his remarks. "In the first place the city is splendidly located. It has a splendid new high school nearing completion, a fine new bridge about completed it has a fine system of churches, and is a city of splendid citizens. All of these are examples of prosperity. Dixon also has a wonderful system of paved highways.

"Like other cities of similar size, Dixon's population, as I have analyzed it in my almost seven years of residence here, is limited. It is not an immense factory center. Observation has shown that growing cities today have a large foreign element. We have no undesirable element in Dixon. We have our problems locally as in every other city of this size. On the other hand we have many inducements in Dixon to atract a fine class of citizenry. We have a very efficient force of officials in Dixon of which we should be proud.

"My impression of Dixon has been that there prevails in this city a spirit of citizenship not to be found in many cities twice this size. There is a genial spirit of good fellowship which is very apparent to the newcomer in Dixon."

HAZARD OF FOG TO AVIATORS TO BE ELIMINATED

New Instruments Given Satisfactory Tests by Army Flier

Mitchell Field, N. Y., Sept. 25—(AP)—The elimination of fog as a hazard of flying seemed assured today. In a demonstration flight three instruments enabled a pilot to rise, fly and land a plane with the cockpit completely covered.

Lieutenant James H. Doolittle Army racing pilot, took up a plane, directed it over a 15-mile course and landed it within a few yards of the starting point yesterday, solely by instruments.

The test was made under the direction of Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Daniel F. Guggenheim Foundation for the Promotion of Aeronautics, sponsors for the experiments.

The new instruments upon which Lieut. Doolittle relied in his canvas-covered cockpit were an artificial horizon, a visual radio receiver and a delicate barometric altimeter.

The artificial horizon is an instrument which shows the plane's lateral and longitudinal angle to the ground when the real horizon is hidden.

The visual radio receiver consists of two vibrating reeds which indicate when the plane is headed directly for its objective and when it is over it. Deviation right or left causes one of the reeds to vibrate more rapidly than the other.

The altimeter is so sensitive it measures the altitude of a plane within a few feet of the ground, making possible safe landings on an obscured field.

Mr. Guggenheim said the instruments would soon be made available for general use and were neither complicated nor of prohibitive cost.

Torture Watchman To Death in Vain

New York, Sept. 25 — (UP) — A night watchman was tortured to death today because he did not know the combination to a safe containing two days' receipts of the Washington Square Laundry Company.

The watchman was known only as Freedman. When he was found, both hands had been slashed with a stilleto, his back had been pierced twice with a knife and his throat cut.

Several chairs were in front of the small safe. The handles of the door were covered with blood. There was blood on the floor. One chair was in front of the safe indicating the robbers had placed the watchman there demanding that he open the safe—an opening that was impossible because he did not know the combination.

After the watchman had been killed his body was placed in a big laundry basket, carried to the loading platform in the rear and then dumped to the ground where it was found later by an employe.

Leech Declines To Become Collector

Morris Cunningham, alias Vicks, Negro, who was returned to Dixon from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was taken before Judge Leech in the county court yesterday afternoon on an information charging him with issuing worthless checks. Cunningham through his attorney sought to make restitution of the amount of the check, which was $75. This brought forth a pointed statement from the court when he said:

"From this time henceforth, the County Court ceases to be a collection agency. In all instances where credit is extended and bad checks are given and the violators are brought into this court, they will be sentenced. There has been a tendency in the past to make this court the collection agency for bad checks and the violators discharged when restitution has been made, but that practice will no longer continue."

Cunningham was sent back to the county jail and his case continued until Saturday to permit him time to secure the amount of the check and court costs. The court also intimated that a sixty day jail sentence would also be meted out.

BULLETIN

Washington, Sept. 25—(UP)—A hurricane, reported near Nassau, will strike the southeast Florida coast between Miami and Jupiter late tonight unless the 42-mile gale suddenly changes its course, according to a statement of the U. S. Weather Bureau here today. The disturbance is moving westward from the Bahamas with "increasing intensity" the Bureau said.

BULLETIN

New York, Sept. 25—(UP)—The British steamer Domara, caught in the westbound tropical hurricane, is ashore north of Abaco Island, according to Palm Beach, Fla., advices, timed 9:30 A. M., to the Radio Marine Corporation today.

Abaco is the northernmost of the Bahama Islands. It is divided in two parts, Great Abaco, the larger southern portion, and Little Abaco.

There is no steamer Domara listed in Lloyd's register but there is record of the Domala, built in 1921 by Curle & Company, Ltd., for the British Steamship Navigating Company, Ltd. It has a registered tonnage of 3441 tons and is run by six oil engines. Its port of registry is Glasgow.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 25—(AP)—Faced with the possibility of the tropical disturbance which has been centered several days nears the Bahamas might approach Florida's East Coast, the state made ready today to receive its unwelcome visitor.

Because of indications that the disturbance was moving west-northwestward at about ten miles an hour all efforts were concentrated along the East Coast to prevent a recurrence of the damage suffered in the storm of last year.

The Weather Bureau's storm warning said the center of the disturbance likely would approach close to the East Coast of Florida between West Palm Beach and Daytona Beach late this afternoon. Indications were that the storm would assume hurricane proportions.

Little sign of an approaching storm was seen along the coast, however.

Prepare For Emergency

The West Palm Beach County Red Cross disaster relief committee, the Miami committee and other relief agencies in other cities along the coast and in the interior were mobilizing in the event the disturbance develops into serious proportions.

Unofficial advices picked up at Jupiter Light and Station W. O. E., West Palm Beach, early today indicated high winds had again come to the vicinity of Nassau, said winds were blowing there at between 50 and 60 miles an hour between 2 and 5 o'clock.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 25—(UP)—A hurricane, blowing up from between Porto Rico and Cuba—a region where destructive storms sometimes breed at this season——probably will not damage Miami, according to observers. Storm warnings are flying and small craft and barges have gone up the Miami river as a precaution; it was believed here that the oncoming storm would not prove destructive for the Miami area.

Washington, Sept. 25—(UP—The hurricane between Porto Rico and Nassau, moving west-northwestward at about 10 miles an hour, will reach the East Coast late today the Weather Bureau announced.

"The center will likely approach close to the East Coast of Florida between West Palm Beach and Daytona" the Bureau said. "It is probable the winds are of near hurricane force near the storm center.

The Bureau ordered storm warnings displayed from Miami, Fla. to Charleston, S. C.

Lost Liquor Suit

East St. Louis, Ill., Sept. 25.—(UP)—Mrs. George Janner, mother of William Ragan, who was killed in a dance hall fight in 1926, lost her $20,000 suit against Mrs. Sam Yociss, alleged to have sold the liquor which caused Herman Gerking to shoot Ragan. An East St. Louis jury brought in a verdict of not guilty yesterday.

Gerking, former police officer, testified on behalf of Mrs. Yociss. He is serving a twenty-year term in the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Menard for the murder of Mrs. Elsie Barhnouse, proprietress of the dance hall, whose testimony had helped clear him in the Ragan case. Gerking was employed as bouncer at the dance hall and shot Ragan when the latter struck him as Gerking was attempting to quiet an argument between Ragan and another man.

Lindbergh Pilots Plane Thru Squall

Miami, Fla., Sept. 25—(UP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh successfully piloted his passenger plane through a series of squalls northeast of Georgetown, British Guiana, today enroute to Port of Spain, Trinidad, radio messages from the Lindbergh plane to the Pan-American Airways here said.

The radio operator aboard the plane reeled in his aerial shortly after advising that the plane was preparing to land at Georgetown at 8 A. M. The visit there apparently was short as the plane re-established communication, possibly while in flight, at 10:37 A. M., to describe the flight through the squalls.

The huge passenger plane, in which Lindbergh flew to Paramariso, Dutch Guiana, to survey a new airmail and passenger route from the United States, ran into the squalls near the Barima river which flows across the northwestern corner of British Guiana near the Venezuela border.

The radio operators first message merely said "going through a squall." Another mbessage, however, said Lindbergh was at the controls and was handling the plane masterfully as it bumped about in the squall. None of the passengers was affected by the roughness of the flight, the message added. Mrs. Lindbergh read a book during the squall.

A message timed 11:40 a. m. said the plane still was fighting the unfavorable weather as it passed over the delta of the Oiroco river, off the coast of Venezuala.

"Still got squalls but apparently doesn't seem to bother 'Lindy,'" the message said.

Still another message describing the series of squalls was received saying "more squalls but all okay."

Private Rainfall

Danville, Ill.—(AP)—Several hundred residents of Stateline, Ind., and vicinity will vouch for this one. Despite a drought in that section, it has been sprinkling for two sunny days on a spot 10 feet square in the yard of W. F. Gaskin at Stateline.

Miss Mary Gaskin discovered the freak when she went out to feed the chickens Monday. Since then, hundreds of persons have visited the Gaskin yard and even the skeptical callers have been convinced. Older residents atrribute the phenomenon to an underground stream or lake while others think the source of the private rainfall lies in an old well nearby. The water in the well, it is said, has always remained at a depth of nine feet no matter how much was withdrawn. But Tuesday the water rose to the well top and since has remained stationary there.

Senate continues tariff debate.

Senate committee continues investigation of William B. Shearer's work at 1927 Geneva naval limitation conference.

Senate Agriculture committee questions Farm Board members.

TUESDAY

President Hoover urged retention of flexible provision in tariff bill which Democrats and Republican Independents hope to strike out.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, said Executive's statement repudiated Republican leaders.

Senate adopted tariff amendments to stop American industries having plants abroad from taking advantage of cheaper labor here.

Another prohibition debate swept Senate as sequel to President's demand for proof law was being flouted in Washington.

Chairman Legge told Senate Agriculture committee it was impracticable for Farm Board to stabilize wheat this year.

Letter of William B. Shearer read to Senate committee said he had given secret British document to Navy during Senate cruiser debate.

Boy, 13, Firebug

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 25—(UP)—A charge of delinquency was placed against John Stowe, 1,3 accused of "touching off" seven fires in Springfield and at Roodhouse, in Juvenile Court here today.

The charges were filed by the State's Attorney's office following the alleged confession of the youth last night to Deputy State Fire Marshal E. B. Bertram.

According to Bertram the boy admitted he set fire to his father's home here four times in the early part of August. Records show that the fire department answered four calls on one night to the Stowe home. A few weeks ago the Stowe family moved to Roodhouse and shortly after three fires destroyed two barns and an outbuilding on the farm of Joseph Vasconcellos. The boy, Bertram said, confessed to starting these fires.

Two Killed in Riot

Chicago, Sept. 25—(UP)—One policeman was killed, two others critically wounded, a Negro shot to death and another Negro wounded in a gun battle in a flat on the south side here today.

The battle came as the result of a search by the police for Kirkland Day, Negro, who was kidnapped from his home by four other Negroes last night.

A police squad led by Sergeant Frank O'Toole entered the flat to search for Day. When they stopped outside a second floor room, a blast of gunfire shattered the door from the inside.

Patrolman William Gallagher fell dead, shot through the head and body. Officers Jesse Holtz and Stewart McCutcheon were critically wounded. Day walked out with his hands raised.

One of the Negroes in the room was wounded. Two others escaped during the excitement, but one was cornered in an upstairs room.

The trapped Negro continued firing and a police officer climbed up a ladder into the room and killed him.

The wounded Negro was identified as Eugene Day, not related to the kidnapped man.

Ten women and four men were arrested.

Kirkland Day said he and his wife had received several threats in the last few days but he said he did not know what was behind the kidnapping.

LIQUOR CHARGES HALT DEBATE ON TARIFF MEASURE

Brookhart Says Liquor Was Served at Banquet at Willard

Washington, Sept. 25—(AP)—Senator Howell, Republican, Nebraska, holds that it was "unfair" of President Hoover to call on him to furnish the Department of Justice "definite facts with time and place" to back up his statements in the Senate last week that the dry law is being violated in Washington.

His assertion that the prohibition law was being violated here but could be enforced if the Chief Executive insisted on it brought a prompt statement from the White House expressing the President's assumption that he "would not make these charges unless they were based upon definite facts" and his desire to have the Capital made "a model in the country" for enforcement.

Asserting he was not able to give such facts and that he felt they should not be demanded of a Senator, the Nebraskan, who supported President Hoover's prohibition views during the pre-election campaign, took his first opportunity to reply in the Senate.

"I spoke from what is common knowledge," he said, "and what is believed outside of Washington to be the condition inside Washington, the repository of our Constitution and the seat of our government.

"I believe conditions here are vastly better than in other cities but the fact remains that bootlegging thrives in Washington."

Would Enlist Butler

He suggested that Major General Emedley Butler, Commander of the Marine Post at Quantico, Virginia who is now engaged in drying up the village which it surrounds, be brought to Washington for that purpose on the strength of his record as head of the police clean-up campaign in Philadelphia several years ago.

He read from reports of prohibition agents which disclosed, he said that prohibition was disregarded in some of the leading hotels in Washington.

"If you close one of those great hostelries, he predicted, "you will see real enforcement."

That and a remark by Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, reminded Senator Brookhart, Republican Iowa, of an incident in which "a prominent Wall Street gentleman" served liquor at a dinner he gave for Senators in the Willard Hotel.

Smoot, protesting against Howell's interruption of the tariff debate, had expressed the opinion that there was little bootlegging in Washington.

Liquor at Dinners

"I ask if the Senator has ever seen any signs of bootleggers around the dinners given by a prominent Wall Street gentleman for the purpose of greeting newly elected Senators," Brookhart inquired.

"I will say to the Senator I have not, but I ask the Senator if he has?" Smoot retorted.

"Yes, I have, and the Senator did too, on the same night," the Iowan replied.

"I do not know what it was", Smoot went on. "I will say to the Senator that I have never been to any place where I have seen any drinking—any club or anything else Wall Street or otherwise."

Brookhart mentioned the Willard Hotel dinner, insisting Smoot was present, although the latter did not recall it.

"The flasks, as I remember," Brookhart related, "were under the table with a curtain around it and all one had to do was to reach down and get his flask and put it in his hip pocket."

MOUNTAINS TO ME

MINE shall be the mountains,
You may have the sea;
Mine shall be the mountains
That rise in majesty.

Timberline and high trails
These are my delight,
Mine the apline meadows,
The stern and snowy height;

Mine the lakes like jewels
Gleaming in the sun,
Mine the singing rivers
That through green forests run.

Pine and spruce and aspen
These are my good trees;
Boughs of fragrant balsam
Shall form my beds of ease.

Where blue gentians blossom
There my camp-site lies,
There my home and haven
Under sapphire skies.

Mine shall be the mountains,
You may have the sea
And all that does remain
Of earth. Mountains to me!

Girls Start Weight Normalizing 'Y' Class

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 25—(UP)—A group of girls started exercising and dieting in a war on too much plumpness here today.

The girls, members of the weight normalizing class of the Y. W. C. A., will meet three times a week to be put through exercises. And there will be exercises for girls underweight as well as for overweight. Weight and measurement charts will be kept in order to guage the change due to exercise. Advice upon diet will be given in connection with the classes.

"Obesity is the result of more food than is necessary and of too little exercise," said Miss Mary Louise Woods, in charge of the girls.

"Weight in relation to age is an important factor in influencing longevity. If there is a determination to follow a program of proper exercise and diet, the results will be gratifying."

MERE MAN WILL STAND AGAINST 'STRONGER SEX'

BY ROBERT H. BEST
United Press Staff Correspondent

Vienna, Sept. 25—(UP)—The famous Hofburg, once the home of the imperial Hapsburg dynasty, presented an awe-inspiring spectacle today as 2,000 champions of equal rights for men met in solemn conclave to take firm steps against the encroachment of the "stronger sex."

Officially the Congress which opened today is known as the Aequitas World League for the Rights of Men, made up of males who have wearied of the "domination of women," and who are determined that woman's place, if not in the home, at least is not at the head of the table.

The delegates to the Congress admit that they are not woman-haters and some of them even go so far as to say that they rather like the opposite sex—in its place. Their campaign, they claim, is not aimed at the "real women" but at the female parasites "who devise new schemes for entrapping men and filching from them their last money."

Chief among the promoters of this crusade is the founder and president of the league, Dr. Siguard Hoberth. Dr. Hoberth is small in stature and none too strong-looking. At first glance one might even be quickly reminded of the stage version of Mr Henpeck. But one an interviewer gets him to talk on the subject of women the man becomes a lion, clear, powerful, full of pepper and vinegar.

Not Woman Hater.

"No, I decidedly am not a woman hater," Dr. Hoberth told the interviewer. "I am far from being a woman hater. I realize that woman has a right to live.

"What I am after"—and here he banged his fist down on the table like a John L. Sullivan denouncing maligners who charged that his left hook was a bit tame—"what I am after is that group of female parasites who spend their days and nights entrapping men.

"We saved one man from a gold-digger, who after obtaining from him a promise of marriage by flattering him on his soldierly appearance blackmailed him into paying into her hands almost the whole of his salary.

"Our program is composed of ten cardinal points:

Congress' Program

"1.—Divorced women who have ways of earning a living should not be entitled to alimony.

2.—Alimony should be fixed in accordance with the duration of the marriage.

3.—When a marriage is dissolved the woman should not be entitled to bear her husband's name. A man's name is his own.

4.—There should be no legal limit as to the time during which a husband or presumptive father can contest the fatherhood of a child.

5.—When a presumptive father has reason to suspect the parentage of a child he should have the right to submit the child and himself to a blood test.

6.—Mothers of children born out of wedlock should help to support their offspring.

7.—Fathers of children born out of wedlock should have the right over the children proportionate to the amount which they contribute to the support of those children.

8.—Children born out of wedlock should be obliged to support aged or invalid parents in exactly the same way that legal children are compelled to do.

9.—No man should be compelled to pay any alimony which reduces his own income below the existence minimum, nor should he be jailed for non-payment of alimony.

10.—All the monstrosities of superemancipated women should be abolished.

The John Coolidges Are Honeymooning

Plymouth, Vt., Sept. 25—(AP)—One of the first places visited by Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge on their honeymoon has been the plain white farm house where six years ago his grandfather, now dead, swore in his father as the President of the United States.

The presence of a Coolidge was no novelty to this little hamlet in the hills, but the neighbors were frankly interested in the new Mrs. Coolidge and, with the freedom of old acquaintances, they flocked to the homestead to pay their respects to the daughter of Connecticut's governor.

The bridal couple reached here last night after a motor trip from Windsor, Mass. They came in Mrs. Coolidge's sport roadster, the gift of her father. Enroute they visited John's great aunt, Sarah Pollard at Proctorsville, and they looked in at Ludlow on John G. Sargent former United States Attorney General, and then continued here.

Fence Disappearing; Co-eds Are Happy

Grinnell, Ia., Sept. 25—(UP)—Glee swept co-ed ranks at Grinnell College today as workmen were tearing down the 15-foot iron picket fences from around lower landings of dormitory fire escapes, erected on orders of college authorities to prevent surreptitious after-hour dates.

Fire Chief E. C. Wheeler received instructions from the State Fire Marshal at Des Moines directing removal of the fences if hazardous to the lives of the girls. The fences were so built, Chief Wheeler said, that the co-eds would have no chance to escape in a fire.

The college girls, incensed at the "penitentiary" and "zoo" aspect of the dormitories, carried the matter to the State Fire Marshal.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

© 1929 by NEA Service Inc.

Giving children a small allowance each week is nothing out of the ordinary nowadays. Parents are realizing more and more the necessity of children learning the value of money, and the limitations of its buying power when they are young.

I believe this is several steps in the right direction beyond the old-fashioned bank that stood on the end of the mantelpiece.

But isn't the old money-pig, or Mandarin's head, or just plain bank, getting to be rather too obsolete? It's been too long a time since Ive seen one to know. Of course they may have gone modernistic, and difficult to recognize, but I have ma doots. That isn't the kind of slot that Johnny's nickels are most familiar with now.

When Father Weakens

On the other hand, are these weekly allowances the discipline they are supposed to be, or merely bonuses? If Johnny says, "I want to go to the movies tonight, but my allowance is all used up" isn't his father likely to dig down for another quarter?

The only way to put son John on an allowance basis is to sit down and figure up approximately what his needs are from Saturday to Saturday. An allowance that you know won't half cover what he spends each week is certainly missing the mark altogether.

If he is to learn budgeting or dividing his income up into fractions for his various expenses, his allowance should cover everything; that is, everything you allow him to buy for himself.

Say that he is young and you still wish to reserve the matter of clothes for your own judgment. All right, then. What is he going to need outside of clothes, discounting amusement and a sundae or two? There will be pencils and little school necessities. Or he may need fish-hooks, nails for his building, medicine for his sick dog, bird-seed mucilage to fix a toy, a birthday present to give a friend, a church-school contribution, car-fare to a picnic and so on.

Set Weekly Average

This may all be classed under necessities. Find a weekly average and mark that down. You know how much you want him to spend on movies and ice-cream cones. Mark that down to luxury.

Now here's where the pig's-head or modernistic skyscraper on the mantel comes in. Figure in a sum each week to feed the pig or fuel the skyscraper, and I believe I'd mark it down first.

Then hand out to John exactly the amount you've added up. And don't give him dividends or bonuses. That's where his training steps in. He must learn to keep out and keep under. Keep out of debt and keep under his income.

If he wants extras let him learn to take it out of the luxury budget. There's a grand lesson!

A last word for the mental ornament. When it gets full let him count the money and put it in the big bank—maybe to go to college, tell him, or to buy his own house when he grows up, or to go into business. A purpose for saving is always an incentive.

FASHION HINTS—

EYE VEILS—Some new hats insist on being accompanied by whimsical looking little veils that spill a few small bits of dots across one's eyes and nose and end at cheek depth.

NEW SHOES—The two and three eyelet tie is having a tremendous vogue in new shoes for fall. Many of them are in purple and green.

BATHING SUITS—It is most important that bathing suits fit well. One that is a bit loose will sag and pull and gather itself in unbecoming folds as soon as it is wet.

FUR IS FEATURED—Fur is a popular trimming. Fur jackets are being sponsored. Often white fur, either ermine or lamb, is coupled with black. The featured coat trimming is brown Persian lamb.

STYLE FUNDAMENTALS There's no disputing that tweeds remain the choice for sports ensembles. Black suits are most important in formal wear.

DAYTIME COLORS—Greens, particularly in strong tones like Empire, bottle and emerald, is the most important day-time color.

EVENING WRAPS — There's a preference for short length types of evening wraps in the new mode. Some coats, though, are long, pointed and flared. Some are flared just below the hips. Varying lengths are seen in capes.

THE NEW FORCES.

The "unreserved sensationalism" of the "yellow press" is sapping the intellectual vitality of the American people and is developing in the big cities an ignorant, prejudiced type similar to the backwoods poor white, says M. K. Wisehart, eastern novelist.

Mr. Wisehart explains that sensationalism journalism "is a substitute for thought, reading and sound information," and that the life of its readers is a life in which the emotions are substituted for intellectual activity.

His criticism is not especially new. The same thnig has been said of the radio and movies. The radio, we hear, has debauched musical taste; the movies have replaced sound theatrical fare with sex thrillers.

All of this is rather depressing. But, fortunately, it is hardly true.

It would have some foundation if the bulk of the citizenry had been accustomed to "thought, reading and sound information"; if the majority always had enjoyed the best in music and the most thoughtful, significant drama. But that is not the case.

"Yellow journalism," so-called, began in the late '90s. The readers that it gained were not weaned away from sober, conservative dailies; they were people who before had read nothing at all. Meager and colored as the news of the "yellow press" might be, it was at least just that much more than its readers had been getting before. Newspapers, in the last quarter century, have reached down to a new stratum of the population: have given reading matter to people who did not read at all.

It is the same with the radio. Countless thousands of people who now listen in nightly to jazz bands never heard music worthy of the name before at all. The music that comes over the air may sometimes be banal and cheap; but it is not displacing anything. It is something new to many radio fans.

The movies, too, are in the same class. The amount of really worth-while drama they have displaced could be engraved on a pin-head and acted by a troupe of deaf mutes. They represent a new form of entertainment; they fill a vacancy that had always existed.

We talk sometimes as if all ages but our own had been characterized by widespread education, good taste, tolerance and deeply-rooted culture. That is utterly false. For all its surface faults, America today is nearer to real civilization than ever before. If the sensational press exploits crime news, it also dares to expose rottenness in public life. If the radio purveys cheap music, it also sends out symphony orchestra music and the voices of grand opera stars. If the movies are maudlin, they also produce, now and then, a redeeming "Big Parade" and "Covered Wagon."

We are waking up. The reading, music and drama that formerly belonged to a few are reaching the many. In the process they may take strange shapes, at times; but the net result is and will be beneficial.

RUBBER—A LESSON IN MONOPOLY.

Attempts at monopoly often defeat their own ends.

Several years ago England, through the famous Stevenson act, limited the amount of rubber her growers could produce, and thereby kept the price at a high level, taking many millions of dollars from American consumers.

It was fine while it lasted. But the high prices it caused stimulated Dutch rubber growers to expand their acreage, and also drove a number of Americans into the business of acquiring their own plantations.

As a result, the Stevenson act has been abandoned. The monopoly has been broken to pieces—broken largely because of an unwise attempt to keep prices above their natural economic level.

The modern world being what it is, that is apt to be the fate of most monopolistic attempts. There is a world of comfort for the consumer in that thought.

A man in Kansas married to get out of jail. Sometimes you have to take what comes.

Stories from Canada tell of the Doukhobors running around without any clothes on. That must be some kind of bathing beach society.

One of these times the Russians are going to attack the Chinese on a day that is not their turn and that will be news.

A Rochester professor says there are 507 known annoyances in the world. Wonder if there's a place on the list for the dentist who smiles when he sticks that burr in your teeth.

The band of New York University went into training with the football team. Maybe something can be done now about punting the piccolo.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

While all the ponies ran around the carpenter took and grabbed a hold of one of them. "Hey, stop this race," said he. "The ponies run 'round every way so we won't hold the race today. But, maybe after all, you Tinymites are fooling me."

"Oh, no," cried Scouty. "That's not right. I know we tried with all our might to make the ponies all run straight. Of course 'tis sad we failed. Let's find some other stunt to do. We'd rather it would be brand new. In every sort of race we Tinymites have often sailed."

"All right," the carpenter replied. "Some other neat plan will be tried. Now, let me think a minute." So the Tinymites sat still. Their ponies, too, stood quiet. Then the carpenter cried out again, "Hop down there, little follows. I will soon give you a thrill.

"Back of my house you lads can find some lumber of the finest kind. It's all cut up in pieces. Bring it here and please be quick." The lumber very soon was found. The Tinies dragged it o'er the ground. Said Coppy, "Gee, I'll bet this plan is going to be real slick."

And then the whole bunch soon found out just what the plan was all about. The carpenter began to build a dandy merry-go-round. The Tinymites all lent a hand, just hoping it would turn out grand. A very fine foundation soon took form upon the ground.

"Make speed! We have no time to lose," the carpenter exclaimtd. "We'll use the little wooden ponies. Say, I guess I'm not so dumb! We'll make this thing look fine somehow." Just then wee Scouty shouted, "Ow!" In trying to drive a nail in, he had missed and hit his thumb.

(The merry-go-round is finished in the next story.)

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY OF—

SIGHTS PACIFIC OCEAN

On Sep. 25, 1513, Vasco Nunez de Balboa, a Spanish explorer, sighted the Pacific Ocean, the first European to do so from American shores.

Confused accounts of a great western ocean which reached Balboa in the Darien territories, of which he was in supreme command, impelled him to go in search of it in 1513.

On Sept. 25, he obtained his first view of the Pacific ocean from a mountain top in the Isthmus of Panama.

Four days later, he reached the water at a point which is still known by the name he gave it, the Gulf of Miguel. He took formal possession for Spain, naming the ocean the Mar del Sur, or South Sea, the coast at this point trending nearly east and west.

The educated men of his time shared his great enthusiasm at this great discovery and the contemporary writers may still be read with much interest.

Governorship of the territories conquered by Balboa, and known as Darien, was obtained a short time later by Pedro Arias (Pedrarias) Davila, through intrigues at the Spanish court, and Balboa resigned the command into the hands of the governor.

Balboa was beheaded in 1517 after a dispute with Pedrarias.

Daily Health Talk

BY HARRY C. GRADLE, M. D., Chicago, Illinois

(This series of articles is prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial Institute, which is organized to perpetuate the life work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Institute are at 1331 G. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.)

Just like Death and Taxes, there comes a time in the life of every individual called Presbyopia. This is concerned with the hardening of a little bit of tranparent tissue lying deep within the eyes. When that time comes, it becomes necessary to hie one's self out and purchase a pair of reading glasses.

Up to the time of presbyopia, the normal person can see in the distance and read nearby without artificial aid, due to an extremely ingenious mechanism that lies just behind the colored part of the eye. Here is a spherical bit of transparent tissue called the lens, which can be flattened when one wishes to look in the distance, or which can become fatter when one wishes to read or look at things at arms' length or less. That change in the thickness is due to the action of a small circular muscle in the eye plus what is known as the normal elasticity of the lens. When the muscle contracts, the lens becomes fatter exactly as does a drop of water that hangs on a thread. When the lens becomes fatter, the rays of light from nearby objects are brought to the proper focus so that the image is clear. But when the annoying age of Presbyopia comes on, the lens looses its natural elasticity so that no matter how much the muscle contracts, the lens cannot assume its former rotundity and the image of things nearby is blurred. The time of life at which that loss of elasticity occurs varies with the health and state of tissues of the individual, with the amount of use to which the eye has been subjected in past life, and with whether the eye is farsighted or nearsighted. In the former, it appears earlier and in the latter, is apt to come much latter.

Fortunately, however, that loss of elasticity can be compensated for with glasses. When you find that the numbers in the telephone directory are no longer clear or that needles are being made with eyes too small for you don't blame it all on the poor light. Stop and count back on your fingers how old you are and see if you have not arrived at the age of Presbyopia, the time of reading glasses. And then when you do consult your oculist, tell him your true age and if you are tender on that point, swear him to professional secrecy. But there is no use fighting against Presbyopia for like Death and Taxes, it is bound to come, and no manner of so-called eye exercises or eye massage or what have youe, will put it off one single minute.

Turn the light on the Truth!

It's just naturally good tobacco—not "artificial treatment" that makes OLD GOLD gentle to the throat and better to the taste

No one cigarette-maker has any monopoly on the heat-treatment of cigarette tobaccos.

For heat-treating is neither new nor exclusive. It has been used for years by practically all cigarette-makers to "set" and sterilize their tobacco.

But OLD GOLD'S goodness does not depend on artificial treatment. It is the product of naturally good tobaccos . . . carefully selected for mildness, smoothness and flavor. Tobaccos made free of "throat scratch" by Mother Nature herself.

Try a package. You'll immediately get the thrill of this smoother and better cigarette. And you'll know then why OLD GOLD'S sales are ALREADY THREE TIMES GREATER than the combined growth of three leading cigarette brands during a like period of their existence.

LOUGHRAN READY, SO IS OPPONENT, MANAGERS STATE

Former Gets His Cance To Show Ability As a Heavyweight

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 25—(UP)—With the American heavyweight championship at stake, Jack Sharkey of Boston and Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia will meet in a 15-round bout at Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

Bigger, stronger and perhaps faster, Sharkey has all the necessary ring equipment to defeat the former light-heavyweight titleholder, but the blonde-haired, blue-eyed Lithuanian has a habit of failing in a pinch. Twice he was pointed for a match with Gene Tunney and twice he failed the late Tex Rickard—when he was knocked out by Jack Dempsey in 1927 and when he refused to try and lost a 15-round decision to Johnny Risko in 1928.

At his best, Sharkey should defeat Loughran.

At his worst, Sharkey should end his ring career.

Loughran Ambitious

Loughran is ambitious to follow in the footsteps of Gene Tunney who went from the light-heavyweight title to the heavyweight championship. Sometimes he even talks like Tunney. More important—can he fight like Tunney? This bout should provide an answer.

Unlike Sharkey, Loughran has a habit of rising mightily to meet every crisis. Leo Lomski floored Loughran twice for counts of nine each and Loughran got off the canvas to win the next fourteen succeeding rounds. Jmes J. Braddock opened a severe cut over Loughran's eye in the first round of their 175-pound title match last July which would have been enough to make a less courageous man become discouraged or rattled. Loughran unnerved Braddock with his utter indifference to the cut and gave young James J. a bad lacing.

Sharkey's Last Bout

The last time Sharkey met a former light-heavyweight champion he knocked him out before the echoes of the first gong had silenced. It was last April when he knocked out Jack Delaney in the first round.

Against smaller men who have no reputation as hitters, Sharkey always has been his best. He is not afraid to take chances and open up with all his guns.

Sharkey is predicting he'll finish Loughran by the seventh round. If Sharkey fights the kind of fight of which he is capable, such may come to pass.

Carrying extra—and perhaps surplus—weight, Loughran contends he is going to try to stop Shrkey. The chances are Loughran's extra weight will slow him up, make him tire in the late rounds and give Sharkey a better target.

Sharkey probably will weigh 193 and Loughran 184.

McAULIFFE'S PROPHECY
By JACK McAULIFFE
Retired Undefeated Lightweight Champion.
(Written for United Press)

New York, Sept. 25—(UP)—The only chance I can see for Tommy Loughran to defeat Jack Sharkey tomorrow night at Yankee Stadium is to forget his science and go out and trade blows with the big Bostonian.

If Loughran goes out to give and take in the first round, it may upset Sharkey's plans and leave him completely at sea. When Sharkey failed to knock out Dempsey as he had planned in the early rounds, he lost his head and paved the way for the Manassa Mauler to win by a K. O.

I don't think Loughran is capable of outboxing Sharkey, principally because Tommy has taken on extra weight and as a result will not be as fast as in his bouts as a light-heavyweight.

FROM SHARKEY'S CAMP
By JOHNNY BUCKLEY
Manager of Jack Sharkey
Written for the United Press

Jack Sharkey is encamped in New York today, ready to whip Tommy Loughran tomorrow night. He will have a ten round advantage in weight, and while he could outbox the Philadelphian, he hopes Tommy will stand up and fight.

Sharkey hopes that if he wins decisively as he intends to do, he will be recognized as heavyweight championship but as usual, he is ready for all comers.

"I not only want to win decisively, but by a knockout," Jack said today. "Then I'll be ready for anyone in the world at Miami next winter. I came thdough this training period without a bruise or an injury and am in the best shape of my career."

New York, Sept. 25—(UP)—In perfect condition, weighing 185 pounds, his legs strong from miles of road work over the Pennsylvania mountains, his heart in the right place, Tommy Loughran is going to stop Jack Sharkey at Yankee Stadium tomorrow night, I feel certain.

Tommy never was in a better frame of mind for a fight.

"I'll make good your prophecy, Joe," he promised me as we broke camp at Harvey's Lane and came to New York.

"I only hope he fights an open battle. Then I'll get him within ten rounds."

Cubs Won Easily In Aurora Exhibition

Chicago, Sept. 25—(UP)—Enlivened by their 16 to 4 vcitory in an exhibition game with Aurora (Ills.) yesterday, the Chicago Cubs were resting today in preparation for their two-game tilt with the Cincinnati Reds this week-end.

A complete lineup of first stringers started against Aurora and every department worked smoothly. Hack Wilson and Gabby Hartnett hit homers.

Perce Malone, the Cubs' fast ball artist, predicted after the game that his team should have an easy job defeating the Athletics in the coming world series, while Guy Bush declared he would be in perfect form again by Oct. 8.

KIWANIANS WILL SUPPORT TEAM IN VICTORY, DEFEAT

High School Gridders to Be Given Good Start Coming Saturday

The Dixon Kiwanis Club voted unanimously at their regular weekly meeting Tuesday afternoon to support the high school football squad this season in every game, "win or lose." The father of two candidates for positions on one of the teams presented the subject to the Kiwanians and strongly impressed his listeners with the necessity of the support of the business and professional men of the city in spite of victory or defeat. Members of the club will form a delegation and parade the field Saturday afternoon just before the first game of the season between Amboy and Dixon.

In order to start the season off with a "bang" the Dixon Boys' band, which organization was originally sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, will lead the parade across the field Saturday afternoon. The club members will lend their support to the team by attending games both at home and in other of the conference cities this fall.

Coach Gives Talk

Coach Lindell, who was a guest at the Kiwanis meeting, was called upon to give his impression of local support in high school football.

"The support of the citizens, men and women, is nine-tenths of the success of the team," Coach Lindell sad. "You men must also realize that the competition is much more keen this season because of the reorganization of the conference, which takes in larger schools and stronger teams. Each individual member of the squad will play a better and more consistent game when assured of the support of the citizens. This is not only true in college football but applies the same to high school football. Civic interest adds one important part in the training of the team that no coach can inspire."

SPORT SLANTS

BY ALAN J. GOULD

When you consider that Connie Mack was piloting the Athletics to their first American league pennant in 1902, before any one of his present-day "Big - Three" — Cochrane, Foxx and Simmons—was born, you have some idea of what it means to the old master to lead the big parade again, 15 years after he ripped apart one of the greatest baseball machines of all time.

When you realize that Mack will guide his "boys" in the world's series battle that starts October 8 at Chicago, where the Athletics of 1910 put the skids under another great Cub team, you may also realize a few of the emotions that stir the competitive spirit of the 66-year-old dean of strategists.

Generations of ball-players, all-time stars such as Cobb and Speaker, have come and gone while Mack has stuck to the helm of the Philadelphia craft, winning seven pennants over a period stretching from 1902 to 1929.

Baseball men think of John Picus Quinn, dean of the Athletics' pitching staff, as an old man. At 44 or thereabouts he is the oldest major leaguer in active service but Quinn was a callow youth of 17 twirling in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, when Mack's famous score-card was signalling to such great moundsmen as Eddie Plank and Rube Waddell, with the 1902 champions.

At about the same time, the left-handed tendencies of Robert M. Grove, aged 2, and George Walberg, agd 3, were being noted for the first time, although it would no doubt have been a severe shock to their parents to be advised by some soothsayer they would later be compared with Plank and Waddell.

The east had more than average share of the great ball-toters of 1928 with Cagle Harpster, Strong, Scull and others in the All-American spotlight. Of this quartet, Cagle of the Army alone is back for another campaign but a few of those worth observing will be Marsters of Dartmouth, Wittmer of Princeton, Opekun of Pennsylvania and Ellis of Yale.

Al Marsters galloped all over the premises for Dartmouth as a sophomore in 1927. I saw him run a great Yale team ragged one afternoon that season and outshine any individual on a field where Bruce Caldwell was doing his stuff for Old Eli. Injuries cramped Marsters style last fall. He never struck his stride. This year he is being drilled to hold down the quarterback post and, barring mishaps, should furnish some of the main thrills the gridiron has to offer. He does everything and does it well.

GRIDIRON NEWS

BY PAUL R. MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Big Ten levelled another suspicious glance at Iowa today.

It wasn't a suspicion of proselyting of athletes, which already has the school under the conference fire, but an apparently well founded one that the Hawks have a better football team this fall than early scouts give them credit for.

Determined to spike their request for readmittance to the Big Ten's good graces by having a championship gridiron machine this fall Burt Ingwerson's men are plowing along with an unusual degree of enthusiasm. They have some holes to plug in the forward wall and a task to fill the charging bustin' shoes of Mayes McLain, but they are making great headway.

Yesterday, the Hawks turned in their best demonstration of the short practice season. With Willis Glassgow and Mike Farroh showing the dash and punch that brought Iowa gridiron fame last fall the first team literally ripped a strong reserve team into shreds in a scrimmage, scoring four touchdowns without much ado. The varsity worked in unison and Ingwerson forgot some of his worries.

For most of the Big Ten teams yesterday was a day of worries over injuries, poor showings and ineligibilities. One exception named "Red" Somers brought joy to Coach Clarence Spears by his exhibition of passes during scrimmage. Somers appears to be a find after Spears' heart and may be a great cog in the Gopher juggernaut.

Illinois had seven potential first string candidates on the injured list today, the last addition of importance being Roy Wietz, regular guard, who hurt his elbow last night. At Northwestern Coach Dick Hanley was confronted with four ambitious tackle candidates who have all but ruined his backfield because of their eagerness to make the varsity, while Indiana, Purdue, Chicago and Ohio State had their share of damaged ankles, heads and such injuries that go with the game.

Effective today, all camps limit their drills to two hours in the afternoon in accordance with the Big Ten rule.

HUDKINS WON FROM ANDERSON IN SIXTH ROUND

Nebraska Wildcat Is Given Decision On a Technical K. O.

Los Angeles, Sept. 25—(AP)—Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, stepped to the front in middleweight fistiana today, ready to sign a contract for a shot at Mickey Walker's crown here Oct. 22. He won the right to meet Walker by knocking out some off Joe Anderson's bridgework in the sixth round of their elemination bout last night.

The Wildcat belted the Kentucky Galloper groggy in the first five rounds of their scheduled 10 round bout, and loosed a right hand thunderbolt to Anderson's face in the sixth. The blow uprooted a couple of molars, and the referee called it a technical knockout.

Hpdkins came to terms suitable to Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, last week, but the contract was turned down on the grounds that the Nebraskan still faced Anderson who had won a decision over him a year ago. Kearns insisted that he floor the Kentuckian to lay a legitimate claim to the contender's corner. If Hudkins did that, he said, Walker's signature was guaranteed.

Ace did as instructed. He tore into Anderson's midsection in the first round and worked up. By the third stanza the Kentuckian slowed down. In the fourth he took two counts. The first, resulting from a solar plexus jab, ran to eight and the second from a solid one on the chin, went one more.

The sixth round was brief. Hudkins jarred a short right to Anderson's jaw, and the latter swung on the ropes. He did not rebound, and the referee raised Hudkins' hand.

SPORT BRIEFS

Forest Hills N. Y.—(UP)—Vincent Richards, defending champion in the professional tennis tournament at the West End courts, meets Wallace F. Johnson, former amateur chop stroke ace, in the feature match today. Other favorites among the pros have reached the quarter finals.

Iowa, City, Ia.—Readmission into the Big Ten Conference will be asked by the University of Iowa at the next meeting of the Conference Faculty Committee probably Dec. 6, the University Athletic Board of Control has announced. Major John A. Griffith, High Commissioner of the Conference, has promised that no basketball schedule will be made up until after the meeting. Iowa was dropped from the Big Ten due to alleged "underwriting" of athletes.

Ann Arbor, Mich. — Raymond Priest, Battle Creek, brilliant sophomore halfback candidate of the University of Michigan was declared eligible for competition by the school's eligibility committee last night. Stanley, Hozer, Muskegon, a big factor in his school's triumph over the Navy gridders last season, was ruled ineligible because of scholastic difficulties.

Philadelphia — A new National League record for two baggers has been established by Johnny Frederick of the Brooklyn Robins, who hit his 51st of the season off Smythe, Philadelphia rookie. The former record was 50, established by Paul Waner last year.

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard University will be looking for a new crew coach shortly. The resignation of Ed Brown, for three years in charge of Crimson oarsmen, has been accepted by Athletic Director Bingham.

Junior World Series Opens in Kansas City

Chicago, Sept. 25—(AP)—The first four games of the Junior World Series between champions of the American Association and the International League will be played at Kansas City, starting October 2.

Additional games will be played at Rochester, International League champions, until one team has won five games.

President Thomas J. Hickey of the American Association said the agreement was made to do as little travelling as necesasry. Two umpires from each league will be used for the games this year, he said.

New Equipment Given D. H. S. Heavyweights

Complete new equipment was issued yesterday afternoon to the heavyweight squad of the Dixon high school football team. Coach Lindell and his assistants dealt out head gears, jerseys, shimmels, trousers and shoes when the players reported for drill yesterday and the first squad appeared very neat in the new uniforms. The purple shirts have a large "D" on the front with the player's number on the back. These and the trimmings about the arms and chest are in white. The uniforms will be worn for the first time in the game against Amboy next Saturday.

Rockne Looking for Shock Absorbers Now

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 25—(AP)—Knute Rockne, who is usually looking for shock troops now is seeking shock absorbers for his football team.

The defense of the Ramblers so far this season during practice has been far from satisfactory to Rockne and he is giving many of his rookies a chance in the line. He is elated over the offense, however.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

BY UNITED PRESS

New York—Ruby Goldstein, New York welterweight, won a decisive if rather hollow victory last night over Freddy Mueller, Buffalo lightweight. Mueller failed to come out for the seventh round of a scheduled ten rounder after receiving quite a pasting. Goldstein weighed 143. Mueller 145.

Philadelphia —George Courtney, Oklahoma light heavyweight contender, defeated Billy Jones, local Negro, last night, winning the decision in ten rounds after being deprived of all chance for a knockout by breaking a thumb in the fourth.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Charlie Smith of England, a newcomer in ques of heavyweight honors, defeated King Solomon of Panama last night in a slow ten round bout.

Paris—Maurice Griselle, French heavyweight, outpointed Gypsy Daniels, British light heavyweight who knocked out Max Schmelling, in a slow ten round bout at the Cirque de Paris.

Los Angeles—One of the hardest fought middleweight bouts ever staged here came to an abrupt end in the sixth round last night when Ace Hudkins of Nebraska caved in Joe Anderson's bridgework with a vicious hook to the mouth and the latter's seconds tossed a towel into the ring. The dislocated teeth interferred with Anderson's breathing.

BYERS SPEAKER AT DEDICATION ROCHELLE DEPOT

Burlington has Given that City Pretty and Up-to-Date Station

More than a thousand people stood in a drizzling rain at Rochelle last night during the dedication exercises of the new C. B. & Q. depot.

Burlington officials from Chicago and Aurora were present in a private car. The Rochelle band rendered several concerts and an orchestra from the schools played several times during the program. Mayor W. B. McHenry accepted the depot from the railway company. A splendid address delivered by the agent, Mr. Herrick, was one of the features of the program. Mr. Herrick spoke in behalf of his company. Division Superintendent Farrington of Aurora gave a good address declaring that the railway officials were pleased to give to the city of Rochelle a new and modern depot. Several attorneys for the company from Aurora and Chicago also delivered short addresses.

Byers in Address

The principal address of the evening was delivered by John H. Byers of Dixon, Secretary to Congressman William R. Johnson. Mr. Byers paid a splendid tribute to Agent Herrick, who has served his company at Rochelle for over a quarter of a century, and who worked hard to give the city the new depot. He also spoke of the importance of the great railway systems and especially the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and what this railroad has done for Rochelle. It was sixty years ago when the first train over the Burlington pulled into Rochelle. Mr. Byers spoke also of the growth of Rochelle, declaring that it was one of the most prosperous and aggressive cities along the highway from Chicago to the Mississippi River.

Note From Flier?

Santa Cruz, Calif., Sept. 25—(UP)—Friends of Miss Mildred Doran, Flint, Mich., school teacher, who was lost in the Pacific when the airplane bearing her, Augie Peddlar, pilot, and Vilas Knope, was forced down during the Dole flight, were expected to determine today from the handwriting whether she wrote a note found on the shore near here.

The note, inside a rusted can, read: "Am floating on the water. Have been for three days. Forced down by engine trouble. Had no time to locate it. Bye bye world." It was signed "Miss Doran."

Hydrographers said ocean currents could have carried the note about for two years before washing it up. Other notes found in cans and bottles since the Dole flight have been discredited.

Man Who Found First and Only Relief in New Medicine Eager to Relate His Experience.

MR. LEONARD DIMMETT.

"For years I suffered from stomach and kidney troubles, constipation and nervousness," said Mr. Leonard Dimmett, 415 N. Alexander street, Clinton, Ill. "I had severe dizzy spells. Kidney pains across the back were well nigh unbearable. Bloating followed every meal, and I got little good from my food.

"A friend recommended Konjola to me and insisted that I give it a trial. It was simply remarkable the way Konjola took hold of my case. Constipation was relieved, and the dizzy spells came no more. Digestion and appetite improved and the kidney disorder was ended. I can feel new strength coming back and I am gaining in weight. No wonder Konjola is known as the medicine with more than a million friends.

Konjola is sold in Dixon at FORD HOPKINS DRUG STORE, 123 West First St., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

May Name Justice

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 25—(UP)—Appointment of a successor to fill the vacancy on the State Supreme Court bench, caused by the death recently of Justice Cyrus E. Dietz, at Moline, is expected to be made by Governor Louis L. Emmerson within the next ten days, possibly this week.

The Attorney General's office, it is learned, has urged the hastening of an appointment to relieve a congested condition in the court.

Justice Dietz took office last December and he found himself faced with numerous cases which accumulated since Floyd Thompson's resignation. Then he took ill and underwent an operation. He was just beginning to make inroads on the accumulated cases when his death came.

Plane Stops Flames

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 25—(UP)—Farmer Walter Schiffer is still wondering today who the obliging aviator was who yesterday used his plane as a fan to prevent flames from a blazing barn spreading to the farm house.

The aviator soared over the farm where a barn and smokehouse were ablaze, sensed the danger to the house, and drove his plane between th house and the burning structures more than forty times. The danger to the house ended, he soared away without revealing his identity.

"THE HOUSE OF COLOR"

You'll be out-of-date within a year without an Eight!

Why wait another year for an EIGHT?

Motor history repeats itself. You remember what happened to the Four in the medium and high priced fields.

The Six is now succumbing to a sweeping trend toward the Eight—the car of today and tomorrow. In 1923 only 10 per cent of all makes were Eights. This year 41 per cent are Eights.

Studebaker, foreseeing this trend, two years ago brought out an Eight to sell at moderate six cylinder cost.

Today Studebaker sells more Eights than any other automobile manufacturer—Eights that are Champions through and through—that hold 11 world records and more American stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes put together.

Extra gear shifting won't give a six-cylinder car the smoothness and flexibility of a Studebaker Straight Eight. Wealth of power, smoothness at all speeds, flashing acceleration—manifest and provable thrift—these qualities are found without compromise in a Studebaker Eight.

Today look over a smart new Studebaker Eight. Compare prices and features—and remember your new car will be worth more a year from now if you buy the car of tomorrow—a Studebaker Straight Eight!

DR. ECKENER

BY Hugh Allen Copyright, 1929, NEA Service, Inc.

THE FIRST AUTHORIZED STORY OF THE LIFE OF THE COMMANDER OF THE ZEPPELINS

Describing this period—Eckener was then 42—the doctor dictated the following recently:

"There was a prevailing opinion that it was impossible to handle rigid airships of the Zeppelin type on land because the frame was too fragile, with the result that at every contact of the airship with the land severe damage would be inevitable. For that reason Count Zeppelin had chosen the surface of Lake Constance as training grounds for his first flights. These fears, however, soon proved to be mostly without foundation and its was established that with some practice and skill it was entirely possible to handle rigid airships on land.

"However, I might say that the first attempts to establish a passenger service with the large airships was marked by so many difficulties and sad experiences that those days became the hardest and saddest of my life. In spite of my naturally good nerves, in a very short time I became so nervous and was under such strain that soon my hair turned gray and my health was seriously threatened.

"One difficulty was that because o flack of experience and also for financial heasons, we were compelled to take hangars where they were available without considering meteorological conditions. In most cases the offers from hangars came from large cities which were interested in being connected with an airship transportation line. Thus we had very bitter experiences. On the one hand, the service should be regular and on schedule, as the passengers expected to be carried at a definite time and punctually. On the other hand, the results were trat 50 per cent of all scheduled flights were made impossible, .or at least very dangerous, on account of side-winds during the taking in or taking out of the ship.

"Under such circumstances I was very often compelled to use stringent measures in order to avoid the impression that it was impossible to handle large ships for transportation. The results were unavoidable.

* * *

"The very first passenger transportation trip we undertook from Dusseldorf ended in a catastrophe. By a narrow margin, we were successful, after all, in bringing the ship out of the hangar, but soon after the start we became aware of the fact that the weather conditions were still more unfavorable than we had expected. The weather conditions grew worse, the wind blew stronger and stronger and soon the airship could resist no longer. Then, one after the other, two of the three motors fell out of order; then, of course, the fate of the airship was determined. I was compelled to let the ship strand in Rosenwalde in order to at least not endanger the lives of the passengers.

"Thus the first flight ended by a complete disaster, and more than ever the Zeppelin cause seemed to be threatened.

"Fortunately DELAG, who had ordered the ship, did not at once lose courage. They ordered a new one, and soon after a third one to be built. In time I learned to discriminate between good and unfit hangars, and also to better judge the meteorologic conditions that make it difficult or even impossible to handle airships on land. Thus many accidents that, fortunately, were never so very severe, resulted in reliable practice in the handling of the Zeppelin airships."

* * *

"The Schwaben went into service in 1911, having a speed of 48 miles and space for 24 passengers. It made more than 100 flights in half a year between Lake Constance and Berlin.

The Viktoria Luise and the Hansa were added in 1912, having 670,000 cubic feet capacity—about one-fifth the size of the Graf Zeppelin, and the Sachsen, the same size, was added the following year. Eckener was now in command of a fleet.

Flights were made over the North Sea to Helgoland and Denmark, to Nordenay, to Copenhagen, to Vienna.

Many flights in the early days were two or three hours long, returning to the same harbor. Interhangar flights were presenting scheduled of eight and ten hours, charging from $60 to $150 in fares.

All of the flights carried army and navy men who were taking training. For the German navy was beginning to buy airships and looked to DELAG to instruct its personnel. Every German airship pilot in the world learned his art from Hugo Eckener.

* * *

DELAG operations ended with the outbreak of the World War. Up to that time the five ships had made nearly 1600 flights, carried 35,000, had flown the equivalent of four times around the world.

Eckener was beginning to think of still wider operations ahead. As early as 1913 in an article—for he was still writer, as well as pilot and business man—he suggested a possibility of a tie-up with steamship companies, so that the passengers could be picked up at Hamburg, Cherbourg and Southampton and carried to cities in the interior at a great saving of time over that required by the railroads.

It might be possible, he said, to fly a ship over the Atlantic. The route from Spain to Brazil with favorable trade winds wasn't at all a fairy story, he wrote.

This was 16 years ago.

He was to conclude presently that the task of the airship was indeed to supplement steamship service—but not merely in carrying its passengers to inland points. Rather, since stretches of land and stretches of water were but areas to fly over, the airship would take over that portion of overseas carrying, whether passengers or mail or express, where a speed twice or three times the possibilities of the steamship was desired.

But then came the war and commercial activities had to be set aside until happier days.

CHAPTER VII

Dr. Eckener had just reached his 46th birthday when the World War broke out, and DELAG ships were taken over by the government. He applied for a post as Zeppelin commander. But he was to lead no bombing raids, see no reconnaissance operations of the great fleet.

The spectacular operations of peace-time airships had given the German public high hopes for their use in war-time, especially as Germany was the only country possessing this type of aircraft. The government foresaw a need for many Zeppelins, realized the shortage of competent personnel, had some conception at least of the length of time needed to properly train officers and men.

Eckener had had wider experience than other man in Europe in flying ships. He must be held at home to train new pilots. Someone must be at hand to pass on to new men the accumulated flying experience of four years of peace-time operations. Dr. Eckener was logically that man. He set himself to the task of fitting other men to command.

* * *

How thorough the training Dr. Eckener gave the military pilots can be realized only by considering what an airship commander's duties are.

His motors are housed in small cars outside the hull of the ship, the farthest of them 500 feet away. From the control car up forward the commander may order his motors run at full speed, at half power, at idling speed. He may cut some motors and run the rest, may with the present type order some run in reverse if he wants suddenly to check speed. However, motors are motors, whether on airship or surface craft or automobile.

The airship has two sets of rudders, two steering wheels, one set controlling direction, the other altitude. For the airship sails in two dimensions. The commander must keep his ship in trim, know that whatever consumption of fuel, or what shifting of ballast, the ship from stern to stern is in equilibrium. Though there are times when it may be desirable to fly his ship at an angle through the air, making it nose-heavy or tail-heavy. He can check the trim of the ship from his instrument board, can direct his helmsmen from the bridge.

* * *

The main lifting force in the ship comes from the fact that it is inflated iwth a gas much lighter than air. The lift of a ship, however, is not constant. It varies with temperature and barometric pressure. The ship has better lifting power in cold heavy air than in warm, lighter air. However, in cold weather this gas contracts, while in warmer air it expands, so that the resultant lift is a matter of rather careful mathematics.

In landing a ship he must be careful not to drive it down too hard and do damage to it, but he also must not swing down too cautiously and miss his landing crew entirely.

As he consumes fuel his ship grows lighter and flies higher, with the result that the lifting gas expands and the surplus flows out through the valves at top and bottom. At his peril he must be certain that his valves work freely nad as needed.

He must know the principles of navigation, be able to fly blind, at night or through fog, and know where he is at all times.

He must know weather, and this is so long a story as to require special treatment later.

The manager of a ground station must be ready with landing crews when needed, must have men ready for refueling, regassing, overhaul and maintenance. But the ship commander's responsibility does not cease when he had landed his ship, nor when it is safe in the hangar. Aboard ship his vigilance and watchfulness can never slacken. But aloft or on land, the commander's responsibility persists continuously, until he is relieved of command.

Beyond that he must have junior officers about him thoroughly trained, responsible, at the engines, on the deck, on navigation, and must have crews who know exactly what to do.

And all must know what to do not only under ordinary and normal conditions, but under extraordinary and emergency conditions.

* * *

Perhaps the most spectacular single phase of the Eckener training course was the making of theoretical flights.

Well before the war the conviction had been growing in his mind and that of Count Zeppelin's that the time was not far ahead when airships would be flown regularly across the North Atlantic to America. With typical thoroughness Eckener began making plans to that end. He had directed the compilation of weather reports between Central Europe and New York, getting the data from the logs of a thousand ships and innumerable inland stations until he had assembled a fairly complete weather map of the route, covering nearly 25 years. From this he had been able to draw certain conclusions as to averages in wind directions and velocities. And this huge collection of data was now to become of immediate practical benefit.

* * *

A cadet commander would call at Eckener's office, receive directions to take a Zeppelin ship of given size from Friedrichshafen to New York City, making the flight as of July 1, 1915, let's say.

The commander would then assemble officers and skeleton crew, shut themselves in a great hall, make final preparations for refueling and servicing the ship, get out the weather maps of that period, settle down to work.

They find that a storm was sweeping down from the North Sea across Central Europe that day, but that it quieted down sufficiently by evening so that the ship can be taken out of the hangar safely. They order inspection of docking rail trolleys which harness the ship against cross hangar winds, reinforce the ground crew, place additional men on the windward side to hold the ship steady.

They calculate the lift of the ship at the barometric pressure of that evening, decide on the amount of fuel they can carry.

They determine whether to fly the northern route, take advantage of the fair weather that will follow the storm or to swing south to the Azores and catch the trade winds.

The ship takes off, flies 12 hours, is north of England, has consumed so many pounds of gas, has become lighter, is flying higher, is forced to valve hydrogen to keep down to a better flying level.

En route across, they find new storms and fair weather and hour by hour they calculate their position, their requirements in fuel, and their resultant lift. They alter their course to avoid storms or take advantage of favorable conditions.

Every order necessary to be given in the handling of a ship is thought out in view of the factors and is written down.

From time to time Eckener comes in, surveys the theoretical ship log, consults with them over conditions ahead, asks sharp questions, makes criticisms, points out factors that they had overlooked, and gives a quick quiz to make sure they understand the reason for each movement.

To add to the reality of the flight the officers must remain in their room, having their meals sent in to them, must stay by their tasks until they have made the theoretical landing in New York.

More than a thousand such theoretical flights were made by student commanders. And the lessons impressed on them were to become widely useful when they actually took the bridge of a Zeppelin.

Zeppelin engineers became highly expert through the accumulation of construction experience. During the building of more than a hundred airships, they had opportunity for experiment and for observing the results of experiment to a degree that no other group even approached.

But it should be said in fairness as well that the success of Zeppelin operations was due not entirely to the technical skill of the builders, but as well to the thoroughness of training which Hugo Eckener gave his commanders. And he trained them all.

Missing Ace Turns Up

Mexico City, Sept. 24—(AP)—Col Roberto Fierro, Mexican Army ace missing since yesterday on an air race from Mexico City to Kansas City, turned up today at Apulco, State of Hidalgo. He was unhurt and had landed on account of the fog.

Colonel Fierro gave few details of his mishap, which occurred 45 minutes after he left Valbuena, in a report this morning to the Department of Civil Aviation, but ascribed his landing to bad weather and motor trouble.

Story of Torture

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24—(UP)—A story of torture was told from the witness stand today by an elderly country physician testifying at the trial of three former coal and iron policemen who are charged with the murder of John Barcoski, farmer and coal digger.

Dr. John M. Patterson of Imperial told the jury that he saw Lieut. John J. Lyster, one of the defendants, lash Barcoski, with a long strap while the farmer was in a semi-conscious condition in the coal and iron police barracks.

Lyster twisted Barcoski's broken nose and his ears, the doctor said. Then placed him on a chair, and when the farmer fell to the floor Lyster kicked him.

Dr. Patterson identified a leather strap as similar to the one he had seen Lyster use.

"I told them they would have to stop," he said," that his condition was serious."

Maybe "We" will really do the flying during that 7000-mile air jaunt into South and Central America. For Anne Lindbergh is a pilot, too, and here's the license to prove it. This reproduction of a government permit to fly as a student pilot says that ". . . solo flights shall be limited to the immediate vicinity of the airport or landing field upon which the instruction is based." But Anne won't be flying solo on the southern trip, and under the expert tutelage of Colonel Lindbergh she will be able to take the controls of their big plane.

DREAD NEURITIS GONE AND SHE LAUDS GLY-CAS

Other Medicines Had Never Given More Than Few Days Relief; Had Suffered Day and Night.

"Any doubts I may have had about Gly-Cas as a treatment for neuritis were very soon banished after I started using it and now, where all the other medicines had never given me more than a few days' relief, this wonderful Gly-Cas has actually entirely rid me of awful neuritis suffering of years' duration," was the recent remarkable statement of Mrs. Margaret Cook, 143 W. Lintoln Highway, DeKalb, Ill.

"But before," she continued, "for all my trying different medicines, going to authorities and taking special treatments, except for the few days temporary relief I spoke of, I remained in the same miserable condition from neuritis, with both my arms, shoulders and neck terribly afflicted. Could use my arms only with agony and my neck was always stiff. Briefly, I suffered day and night and could get no real relief. I became interested in Gly-Cas, after people I knew, told me of results it was giving them and the very first week of treatment with this medicine I began to rest and sleep better, as the awful pains were gradually but surely being relieved and now I'm honestly completely rid of neuritis. For the first time in years there isn't a sign of it anywhere in my body and I'm frank to say I just never had such a medicine as Gly-Cas before and sincerely believe it will give the best of results in other cases like mine."

Gly-Cas is sold in Dixon at the Campbell White Cross Pharmacy, Sold Franklin Grove, G. S. Ives; Polo, C. R. Clothier; Ashton, G. R. Charters; Amboy, Aschenbrenner Drug; Compton, W. H. Hills; Rochelle, Barker & Sullivan and by leading druggists in all surrounding towns.—Adv.

Few Hunters Out On Duck Season Opening

Yesterday officially opened the duck hunting season in the northern zone but the mid-summer atmosphere did not add to the zest of the occasion. Very few hunters ventured forth early yesterday morning to seek out the early flocks and from all reports, a very small number of birds were killed.

The long continued dry spell which caused many of the ditches and ponds to dry up completely presents a discouraging outlook for the local duck hunters. Many leased ponds are dry and the prospects point to a scarcity of water this fall. The northern flight has not started south for the winter and only a few teal and mallard ducks are reported in this vicinity, these having hatched out during the summer. The duck season is later in opening this year, the state law being changed to conform with the federal migratory bird act, but is extended to permit the same number of days in the open season.

THE SCOREBOARD

BY WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

With the attention of fans and players alike centered upon Miller Huggins' fight for his life in a New York hospital, a solemn tone was evident along the big league trail yesterday as the afternoon's program was unreeled. Melvin Ott of the Giants and the veteran Tom Zachary of the Yankees shared such spotlight as there was, Ott with his forty-first and forty-second home runs and Zachary with his twelfth victory in a season which has brought him no defeats.

Ott slashed a ball into the right field seats in each of two games at the Polo Grounds, and his drives were instrumental in bringing the Giants home in front in both encounters by 5 to 4 and 6 to 5. The two blows enabled the young New York outfielder to tie the National League record made by Rogers Hornsby in 1922 when the Rajah won the major league crown with 42 home runs. That was the year Ruth was suspended for the first five weeks of the season because of an unauthorized barnstorming trip the previous fall.

* * *

Carl Hubbell just shaded the veteran Harry Seibold in the opener but McGraw was forced to employ both Carl Mays and Joe Genewich to earn the second decision. The Giants made five errors in the nightcap. Ben Cantwell toiled for Boston.

The Phillies rallied sharply against Johnny Morrison in the eighth to pull out a decision over Brooklyn by 8 to 6 in a slam-bang game.

Chick Hafey again pulled his home run act with Jim Bottomley on base, and as a result the Cardinals outpointed Red Lucas and the Cincinnati Reds by 3 to 1. It was Hafey's twenty-seventh. Wild Bill Hallahan pitched for St. Louis.

Pittsburgh and Chicago were not scheduled.

* * *

The Yankees went to Boston yesterday to open a brief and inconsequential series, but their minds were with their stricken manager at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York. The fallen champions nevertheless won from the Bostonese by 5 to 3 before a crowd of 8,500 fans celebrating the Hubs' annual "Babe Ruth Day." The Babe failed to get a homer, despite a plea from the crowd to Boston pitchers to "let him hit it." He did, however, get a single and a double.

* * *

The victory not only added a twelfth triumph to Zachary's perfect record, but also placed him one game ahead of any winning mark ever made by a pitcher in regular or semi-regular service. Zachary probably will not pitch again this season, and if not, will enter the record books as the only regular major league hurler to go through a campaign undefeated.

When Willis Hudlin faltered against Ted Lyons and the White Sox in the ninth round at Cleveland yesterday, Wes Ferrell rushed to the rescue and the Indians won by 7 to 4. Arthur Herring pitched Detroit to a 9 to 4 victory over the Browns at Navin Field. Alvin Crowder was his victim.

The Athletics and Senators had an open date.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

HELEN PAGE feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, LEONARD BRENT. But he represents all that she knows of home and family and she adores him blindly. Brent changes all his plans for Helen's future after a chance meeting with a dying beggar, CHARLES NELLIN, who tells a strange story which Brent is able to corroborate to some extent by a visit to Yonkers.

On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian of his promise to reveal her parentage and is amazed when he informs her that she is heiress of a millionaire, CYRIL K. CUNNINGHAM, and that he promised to take her to him when she was 18. They go to Yonkers and Brent introduces her to Cunningham as his granddaughter. He offers as proof the locket containing a picture of EVANGELINE CUNNINGHAM which he had taken from the dying Nellin.

Helen remains at Bramblewood pending investigation of her story. Cunningham presents her with a new car which she drives everywhere until she accidentally hits a girl, EVA ENNIS, who has to be taken to the hospital. Eva's brother, ROBERT, upbraids Helen for her reckless driving and then offers to take her home. Cunningham receives him graciously and invites him to spend the evening. The young couple go for a canoe ride.

Next day Brent arrives and when he hears about her meeting with Robert takes her to New York for dinner and the theater. Coming home that night he kisses Helen for the first time and tells her that he loves her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

HELEN was superintending the serving of her grandfather's dinner in his room when he spoke to her about his plans for her birthday celebration.

"I'd like you to have a party, my dear," he said to her suddenly when she unfolded his napkin and laid it across his lap.

Helen's surprise was her only answer.

"On your birthday—your nineteenth birthday," Mr. Cunningham continued.

"Oh," Helen exclaimed, "I . . ." she stopped. An expression of disappointment was coming over the aged man's features. It touched her. After all, she reflected quickly, she could go out with Leonard another time. And he could come to the party.

"I've never had a real birthday party," she said enthusiastically. "I should love it."

If Mr. Cunningham detected a trace of regret in her voice he did not reveal it.

"I wonder," he said, "if you would like to have it as I would."

Helen waited inquiringly.

"A party of yesteryear," he said softly. "But of course you don't know what that would be like."

"Tell me about one of mother's parties," Helen said impulsively.

Mr. Cunningham patted the hand she reached out to him. "I'd rather recreate one of them for you," he replied, "on your birthday."

He went on then to tell her of his plans. It was his wish, he said, to recall the spirit of his daughter's youth—to see young people about him in the costume of older days.

"But I'm sure they would spoil it for you with their dancing," Helen interjected. "Jazz wouldn't go with a minuet setting."

"Must they have jazz?"

"I'm afraid they don't know how to dance to other music, except waltzes."

"Well," Mr. Cunningham sighed, "we will make it fifty-fifty, as you youngsters say. A waltz for a . . . what are they called?"

* * *

HELEN laughed. "Oh, anything," she said; "Raccoon, Mess Around, Lowdown, Drag . . . anything."

A few minutes later, in a secluded corner of the library, he tore the locket from his pocket and opened it.

Mr. Cunningham smiled. "You will have to ask some of your school friends," he suggested, "though I notice you are beginning to be popular with our local society.

"Perhaps you can get Joyce Selwynd to help you with your invitations," her grandfather remarked.

"It's probably the only way I can get enough people for a party," Helen admitted.

Mr. Cunningham looked at her with grave concern. "Your position here is a . . . a bit trying, my dear, isn't it?"

Helen glanced away. She did not like to tell him that she had found it necessary to evade certain politely veiled inquiries put to her by Mrs. Selwynd and a few other socially important people whom she had met.

"We'll remedy that—in time," Mr. Cunningham said hastily. "Don't be discouraged, dear. Mr. Greaves' reports are favorable to you." He smiled to himself, thinking of the surprise he was planning for her.

His words pleased Helen. She had not ceased to hope that if he was not going to accept her as his granddaughter he would soon let her go back to Brent. The uncertainty of her position irked her.

But the grounds of Bramblewood had afforded one delightful surprise. Seen from the highway the estate had a neglected, forsaken look. But Helen had quickly discovered the western veranda with its climbing roses and the well-kept garden that led down to the lake. This small garden, she learned one day, was visible from the room that had been her mother's.

Her grandfather had given her the key to the room without comment other than, "you are the first to enter it."

Helen understood that he meant since her mother's departure.

* * *

THERE was much that she was grateful for. Many things to be fondled and wept over. And at last she came upon a photograph of Charles Nellin—of the man she believed to be her father.

She studied his handsome features intently and reverently and wondered why there was a slight chill at her heart. The picture of her mother, in the locket, she loved. There was a sad fatality in it that touched a responsive cord in her own heart, but Charles Nellin's countenance lacked the power to move her.

As the days passed and the preparations for her birthday party went smoothly ahead, she paused often to look at that pictured face and wonder if her mother had been happily married.

A happy marriage, Helen was beginning to believe, might conceivably be a very rare thing. For, old-fashioned as she was in certain matters, she was modern enough in others. In regard to Brent, for instance, she was frank with herself. She knew she would marry him if he asked her to, but she knew also that their life would be shadowed by his past.

She tried, struggling with her fledgling philosophy of life, to tell herself that she was not jealous of him. "It's only that my ideals are toppled a bit," she put it.

She thought she preferred a pristine love, unguessing of the passion that accepts the past as dead, and forgets it where that is the only way to happiness.

This thought was in her mind on the night of her party when she witnessed Brent's triumph with the other girls. Helen smiled over it, but a hint of worry crept into her eyes as she saw him lift Eva Ennis' lovely hands to his lips.

Had she known with what detachment the act was committed she might have been at peace. But had she known that it was a duty kiss—one that Eva would accept—she might well have been disturbed.

The girls had not exchanged confidences. Brent's training of Helen had cultivated a natural reticence almost to the point of making secrecy a habit with her.

And Eva was too shy to talk. Brent was too wise. Eva did not know that Helen was more than a ward to him and Helen did not know that Brent was amusing himself with Eva.

* * *

ON the occasions when the two met at Bramblewood it seemed quite natural to Helen that they should sometimes be alone together. Brent had been surprised to find that Eva interested him at a second meeting.

He had flirted a trifle and then tried to drop it, but Eva's simplicity interested him. Had he been a bit wiser than he was he would have known that it was the simplicity of genius—of greatness, that needed no camouflage of complexity to express itself.

But tonight, as he kissed her hand, he was not thinking of Eva. As quickly as he could he left her, to seek seclusion and examine an object that seemed fairly to be burning a hole in his pocket.

It was a locket. Identical with the one he had taken from Charles Nellin's possession.

He had found it on the floor of the main building. Just inside the door. As he picked it up he thought that Helen had dropped it there. He had put it in his pocket with the intention of returning it and cautioning her against such carelessness.

Before he could locate her he had seen Eva. And just as she came up to him, smiling a welcome, Helen had appeared behind her. Brent's quick eye saw in a glance that Helen was wearing her locket.

For an instant his mind was in a whirl. Then he bent over Eva's hand and bestowed the customary kiss upon it. When he looked up Helen was turning away.

A few minutes later, in a secluded corner of the library, he took the locket from his pocket and opened it. It must be, he knew, the locket that Mr. Cunningham had spoken of—the one he believed his daughter Evangeline had taken away with her.

He had expected to see Cyril Cunningham's picture in it. An exclamation of surprise escaped him when he saw that it contained one of Charles Nellin instead.

Whom could it belong to? Where had it come from? He must, he told himself, find out at once if Helen had discovered it here at Bramblewood or if . . .

The thought that someone here, among the guests, might be the owner of the locket brought a cold perspiration to Brent's usually cool brow.
